Jimmy Fattig was killed in an automobile accident two weeks before his planned enrollment at Northwest Nazarene College in the fall of 1986. Those who would have been his classmates, the Class of 1990, initiated this scholarship in Jimmy's memory as their major class project.

Jimmy was an honor graduate of Hoopa High School in Willow Creek, California, where he was active in the wrestling program. In 1984 he was named as the All-County Wrestler. In 1985 he traveled to New Zealand as a member of the Redwood Cultural Exchange Wrestling Team. He was also active in his church where he served as president of the Willow Creek Nazarene Youth International group.

His employer, Jess Garst Jr., editor of the Willow Creek Kourier, wrote in a letter to NNC: "Jimmy was a remarkable young man. A fine Christian example, a leader among his peers, hard-working, serious and yet fun-loving --- a gentleman in every respect -- any and all of these descriptive phrases are quite applicable. I'm sure, if he had become a part of your student body, you would have found him to be a valuable asset."
